A Message from Vice Mayor Steve Frate

Thank You to Our Local Heroes

Recently, I watched a program about public safety personnel who had been injured, or lost their lives in the line of duty. The show concluded with: "It is not how these officers died that made them heroes, it is how they lived." This made me reflect on how our public safety personnel, both Fire and Police, are willing to put their lives on the line every day to keep us safe. And so, this column is dedicated to our local heroes.

If you have ever been involved in a car accident or fire, within a few minutes, firefighters and police officers were at your side. The Glendale Fire Department keeps our community safe through prevention and education. The Fire Department provides a variety of emergency services, but firefighters also make community education a priority. From water safety walks, to teaching CPR, they are well-trained professionals who care about our residents.

The Glendale Police Department's goal is to provide the most effective response to law enforcement emergencies, neighborhood problems, and traffic violations, ensuring that Glendale continues to be a desirable place to live and do business.

They too are well-trained professionals who are dedicated to this community. The loss of two of our officers in recent years is incomprehensible, and words alone cannot thank those officers – and their families – enough for making the ultimate sacrifice.

Public Safety remains our highest priority. Critical to the provision of quality public safety services are the people who put their lives on the line every day. I would like to take this opportunity to thank them for all they do for us.

It has been my honor to serve the residents of the city of Glendale.
